NORTHFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, NOV. 8, 1929

PRICE FIVE CENTS

THEIR DAY OF JOY

Eleven years ago, on November 11, 1918, the World war was ended. Verdun, Ypres, Chateau Thierry and other fields where the manhood of the warring nations fell, no longer were to be the scene of the ear-piercing noise of cannonading. And with tear-stained faces, the world was able to laugh again after more than four years of strife.

And each year since, at the same hour, the world stops its business for two minutes to pray for the peace of the dead heroes and for the continued peace of the world.

ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM

The committee of the Haven H. Spencer Post, No. 179, American Legion, has made elaborate arrangements for the Armistice Day exercises this year, and all citizens, school children and visitors are cordially invited to participate. It is hoped that every home in town will display a flag to show their appreciation of the day we celebrate.

At 11 a. m., the hour of the signing of the armistice, it is asked that a minute of silence be observed. Just before this time it is urged upon all who have bugles or cornets to stand outside their doors and blow the call "Cease Firing." It is hoped that this call will ring out from every section of our town.

At 2:30 p. m. there will be a general assembly in front of the Town hall, and all veterans, patriotic and uniformed organizations, as well as all citizens and school children who desire to do so, will parade on Main street.

At 3:30 p. m. the unveiling of the memorial tablet in the Town hall will take place, and at 4 o'clock there will be a general assembly in the Town hall auditorium for the Armistice Day exercises and the dedication of the memorial tablet.

At 6 p. m. there will be a supper in the Town hall, served by the Legion Auxiliary, and an exhibition of war relics (not shown last year) in the Legion room at the Town hall.

At 8 o'clock Goodnow's singing orchestra (six pieces) will give a patriotic concert in the auditorium, and this will be followed by dancing from 8:45 p. m. to 1 a. m., with the same orchestra. The committee have procured some unique war relics which will be given as prizes to three of the lucky dancers.

Mrs. Sloane, who has spent the summer with her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Whitmore, returned to Allston last week for the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Amsden.

FIFTIETH YEAR OF THE SCHOOLS

Students and alumnae from 48 States and 55 countries joined hands and hearts here Saturday to commemorate the golden anniversary of the founding of the Northfield Schools by the world renowned evangelist, Dwight L. Moody. Participating in the exercises were three of the first 16 students who, 50 years ago to a day, trudged through 16 inches of snow to the Moody home, which he had turned into the first seminary building as the result of having been driven by an urge to give up a profitable business to help ambitious youth to an education and to a better life.

Conducting a revival in California at the time, Mr. Moody addressed the student body by letter: "I pray God that on this day streams of influence will be started that will go out to bless the world." Since that day, over 21,000 students have passed the portals of Mount Hermon school for boys and Northfield seminary, constituting The Northfield Schools, to lives of greater usefulness in the home, the office and the schoolroom.

Following the services in the Russell Sage Memorial chapel, the three members of the class of '79, Miss Nancy E. Comins, Hadley, Mass., Mrs. Lulu Newton Tyler, South Vernon, Mass., and Mrs. Harriet Clark of Derry, N. H., were greeted at Mr. Moody's birthplace and re-introduced to Northfield seminary's first buildings by members of the freshman class garbed in the dresses the three wore at the time they entered the seminary half a century ago.

At the close of the ceremonies, the three members of the first seminary class were entertained by Elliot Speer, president of the Northfield schools, and Miss Myra Wilson, principal of the Northfield seminary.

At Sage chapel on Sunday afternoon, Elliott Speer read a sermon of D. L. Moody's, "What Think Ye of Christ?" with splendid effect. And also on Sunday morning Rev. Francis W. Pattison gave a children's talk and prayer illustrative of the occasion.

NOVEMBER 11, 1918—ARMISTICE DAY—NOVEMBER 11, 1929

THE PACT—By Alfred Noyes

They have no pact to sign—our peaceful dead.
Facts are for trembling hands and heads grown gray.
Ten million graves record what youth has said,
And cannot now un-say.

They have no pact to sign—our quiet dead.
Whose eyes in that eternal peace are drowned.
Age doubts and wakes, and asks if night be fled;
But youth sleeps sound.

They have no pact to sign—our faithful dead.
Their is a deeper pledge, unseen, unheard,
Sealed in the dark, unwritten, sealed with red;
And they will keep their word.

They have no pact to sign—our happy dead.
But if, O God, if WE should sign in vain,
With dreadful eyes, out of each narrow bed,
Our dead will rise again. —New York Times

P.-T. ASSOCIATION REGULAR MEETING

The Parent-Teachers' Association held its regular meeting Monday evening, Nov. 4, in Alexander hall, with 55 present. A committee of four was appointed to see about offering prizes to school children making the best posters. A committee of three was chosen to confer with the library trustees to see about starting an educational book shelf for the use of the Parent and Teacher members.

The topic of the evening was very ably discussed by Mrs. W. G. Webber and Mrs. Robert Wilder.

Mrs. Webber gave illustrations of what is being done in the Horace Mann school toward teaching this subject to children of the elementary grades and the wonderful results obtained. Mrs. Wilder believes self-sacrifice to be one of the main factors toward the making of citizenship. She spoke of D. L. Moody and all that his name stands for as the founder of the Moody schools and the promoter of education. She also paid tribute to the men who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War, and also to the men who stood ready and willing to make that same sacrifice if they were called upon, toward the furtherance of a great cause.

Miss Helen Bush of the Seminary faculty very generously gave several piano selections of modern music, with brief interpretations by American, English and Hungarian composers, which was much enjoyed by all. The meeting was followed by a social time, with Mrs. Charles Johnson as hospitality committee and Mrs. Ross Spencer in charge of refreshments, assisted by her committee.

Sir Philip Ben Greet in "Hamlet" at Auditorium

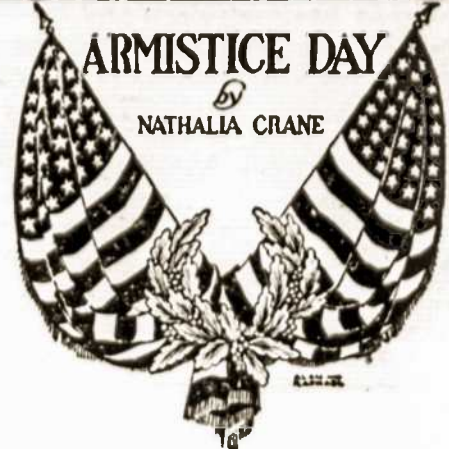

On Nov. 23, at the Auditorium, there is to be given an unusual treat for Northfield—Sir Philip Ben Greet, the English actor and producer, with a notable English company, will present Shakespeare's Hamlet. Ben Greet has been on the stage for 50 years and has taught more actors than probably any living man. For 50 years he has been prominent in England for the performances which his splendid companies have given in London, Oxford, Cambridge, Stratford-on-Avon and other places in Shakespeare's England. Many of the largest universities in the United States have enjoyed his performances. Ben Greet has a carefully selected and personally directed company of English actors, whose first concern are faultless diction, absolute reverence for the text and high regard for the spirit of the play. Ben Greet had conferred on him last June 3, his birthday, the honor of knighthood by King George V. of England, in recognition of a life devoted to the cause of drama in education. He is in the United States for a 25-week tour with his company and has been asked to then resume his productions in London by the London council.

Special Appeal on New England Ruffed Grouse

The New England ruffed grouse investigation committee, which is sponsored by the Massachusetts Fish and Game Association, has sent out a special appeal. Dr. Alfred O. Gross, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., wishes to receive the complete carcasses of all grouse that can possibly be sent to him from any part of New England.

We often have reports of birds which have been accidentally killed. It is important that every such specimen be taken charge of, wrapped securely in paper and shipped by parcel post to Dr. Gross at the above address. The sender's name to be indicated clearly on the package, with a letter explaining where and under what circumstances the specimen was obtained.

The Northfield Fish and Game Association solicits the co-operation of the many sportsmen of the vicinity in this important investigation.

Armistice day in Arlington, with infant/ from Myer;
A trumpeter advances from a silent army choir.

The wreaths lie on a tabled stone within a roofless nave—
The laurel of Bethesda on the Unknown Soldier's grave.

Solemnly mid cameras; the overseas men lean upon a Springfield pattern and behold another scene.

The gleam of Hampshire marble fades, dissolving minarets
Turn into misty valleys and the muddy road to Metz.

A shock division whirlpool in the Saunter of the Dames;
The ash cans coming over and old Thibault court in flames.

St. Mihiel muttering about the scissors and the spool,
And ambulances pouring twenty thousand into Toul.

The Argonne boastful to the last, the foxholes just as vain,
And ammunition wagons trotting through a soldier's brain.

From the time that the first great earthquake
Made love on a Russian's plan,
The metals, the vapors and acids
Were contraband seizures of man.

And out of the inorganic
As a dwarf from a Chinese jug,
They tottered, obedient pagans—
The sword blade, the spear head and slug.

After them came the bugle, the
Into deformity led,
Thinking each leader an ideal
Facing a mortal's head.

But now they have seen a Gautama
Pick up a silver and sign,
And peace rising out of a thimble
Instead of an inky Rhine.

And while the nations tarrying, do honor to a morn,
Truth issues from the galleries within a silver born.

The laurel of Bethesda stirs, the Hampshire marbles gleam—
There are no dead who pass beyond the promise of a dream.

TRIBUTE TO OUR OWN "A. G."

In the New York Sunday Times was the following:

Ambert G. Moody, nephew of Dwight L. Moody, founder of the Northfield Seminary for Girls and the Mt. Hermon School for Boys, has completed 50 years of official connection with these schools. He is the dean of the staff. His duties began when, at the age of 13, he helped to transport from the East Northfield railroad station, then known as South Vernon, the 16 girls who constituted the first class of the seminary.

After the death of the evangelist, when William R. Moody, his son, took charge, Ambert remarked to him, so the tradition says, "You can provide the coal and I will shovel the ashes."

Today, Ambert Moody is secretary of the board of trustees of The Northfield Schools, assistant treasurer of the schools, manager of the Northfield hotel, all profits from which go to the schools, and business manager of the Northfield Bible Conference. For many years he served as superintendent of grounds.

While virtually all others have come and gone, Mr. Moody has remained here without interruption, save for a few weeks' holidays taken at intervals far apart. When he was a student in Amherst College he used to go "home" during the vacations and work to keep himself in school through the next year.

In 1890 he was put in charge of the hotel, which had been erected two years previously. He originated the idea of having the students do all the work and this has been done ever since.

The story is told that on one occasion an earlier hotel manager returned after an absence from his post to find all the employees intoxicated. It was then that Ambert Moody was manager and instituted the student help system. The tips they receive, especially in the summer, aid them in continuing at school.

Mr. Moody has a home in East Northfield and a wife and four children, the youngest of whom, Miriam, attends the seminary. The eldest daughter, Esther, is the wife of George W. Look, treasurer of Princeton Theological Seminary. One son is A. Gordon Moody of Chicopee and the other is George W. Moody of Santa Barbara, Cal.

Mrs. Moody was Miss Frances Wells of Dover, Ill. Mr. Moody met her while she was a student in the seminary.

A past president's badge was presented to Mrs. Mattern, retiring president of the Northfield unit, as a mark of affection and esteem and deep regret was expressed that other duties prevented her from carrying on the work for another year. During Mrs. Mattern's presidency, the unit has done much work for the sick and disabled veterans and their dependants, both locally and in the State organization, as well as other social and welfare work. It is planned to carry on this fine work during the coming year under the leadership of Mrs. Ross, the new president. Mrs. Stanley Payson was appointed chairman of the welfare committee.

It is expected that Northfield will respond heartily and generously. Be ready for the canvasser in your district. West Northfield
South Vernon, Mass.Entertainment at Smith
Schoolhouse, South Vernon

Quite a company of the townspeople gathered at the Smith schoolhouse in South Vernon to listen to a fine entertainment given last Wednesday week by Mrs. Ruth Hall Holton, teacher, and her pupils. The children took their parts well in speaking, singing and acting, which shows the practice and good training their teacher has given them. Several interesting plays were given by the children. The play, "Wanted A Wife," given by Mrs. C. I. Holton and her daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Gibson, was very funny and enjoyed by all present. The schoolroom was prettily decorated with red and white paper ribbons, with black cats, witches and jack o' lanterns. The 4-H Club, the State in Garden Club of South Vernon joined the school entertainment with an exhibition of their summer's work, showing some of the garden produce they had raised, such as onions, squashes and canned goods. After the plays, the Windham County Club agent, Bruce Buchanan of Brattleboro, Vt., gave an interesting talk on the good work of the 4-H clubs are doing. During his talk he lighted a candle and after each club member had recited a verse, they each in turn lighted a candle from their leader's light, which represented how much good a boy can do by holding his work and aims high as lights, so that other boys may see the good work he is doing and want to become a good, useful citizen, too.

During the candle light service, Mr. Buchanan gave out the club work prizes. The gold seal and ribbons were won by the club for every member having completed their records up to date. Robert E. Bruce, Victor Vaughan and Charles Krause received gold seals for their certificates. Donald Strange and Audrey Zaluzny received first year certificates and pins. Mrs. Gibson sang two songs, accompanied by her mother at the organ. Out of town guests were present from Vernon, Brattleboro, Vt., and West Northfield. A good sum of money was realized by the sale of tickets, popcorn and candy, to be added to the treasury. Refreshments of sandwiches and sweet cider were served. There were 54 present besides the children.

Hatch as head of the house and Miss Chamberlin as matron, with 12 students entered. The unlucky number of 13 sat down to a bountiful dinner. The menu consisted of mashed potatoes, chicken salad on lettuce, rolls and jelly, stuffed olives, apple pie with ice cream, cookies and cheese. Miss Fanny Hatch was the leading spirit of the afternoon. She gave a very interesting talk on different subjects pertaining to Northfield Seminary and about the wonderful service and inspiring talk given that Saturday morning at Sage chapel by three former students, Miss Nancy Connors of Amherst, Mass., Mrs. Lula Newton Tyler of South Vernon and Mrs. Harriette Fisher Clark of Derry, N. H., who were among the first 16 girls who attended the seminary. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all present.

The Halloween social given at the Town hall last Thursday evening by the Parent-Teacher Association was enjoyed by nearly 150 children and adults. The Misses Ruth Hopkins and Maybelle Potter and Mrs. Mary Zak had charge of the little ones in the hall down stairs, and the games they played were entered into with much enthusiasm. Refreshments were served. Mrs. Mayberry, Miss Earhardt and Richard Clapp kept the young people upstairs busy with various games and stunts supposed to have magic power, while Mrs. Deming, dressed as a witch, disclosed future happenings in a truly prophetic manner. Frank Baker furnished several musical novelties by playing the harmonica and the piano at the same time. The party broke up soon after 10 o'clock and much credit was given the committees in charge for the success of the evening.

Special music Sunday evening consisted of two vocal solos, by Miss Ethel Allen, teacher of the lower grades.

"I have a fine idea for a slow motion picture," said the author.

"What is it?" asked the producer.

"Two Scotsmen going into a theatre to buy tickets."

A Deer Story

Monday morning about 8.30, when an ice cream truck was on the hill near C. L. Parson's farm, he saw an unusually large buck deer crossing the field, only a short distance from Mr. Parson's corner. The buck was running and seemed frightened, as if being chased by a dog. When the truck stopped at the ice cream parlor, someone began telling about a large buck that had just come up the river and stood several minutes in the river back of Germain's garage, and it was thought it might have been the same one seen on the hill by the truck driver. People saw the animal, as it seemed in no hurry after crossing the river.

Heroic Dead Worthy of Their Day of Tribute

Armistice day was set apart as a periodical reminder to this country of what the World war cost it in treasure and in young life and limb. The apparently growing tendency of business to ignore the day meets with a rebuke from Gen. Charles H. Cole, who protests against the commercialization of a day sacred to the memory of his fallen comrades. Veterans of the war will not be alone in applauding this protest. All Americans, whether the war took personal toll of them or not, who are still mindful of the significance of that greatest of all human upheavals, will second it.

With all our wealth, with all our prosperity, we can better afford to slow up the wheels of industry and trade for the space of one short day than to forget the sacrifice made by those who died that those wheels might not be stopped entirely. A nation that can so soon forget the sacrifice will not long remember its purpose or its achievement.—Detroit Free Press.

AS WE HAVE REMARKED BEFORE . . . OUR FUTURE MAY BE IN THE AIR?

Commercial aviation is just another business proposition. And the airport part of it is no different. Just as water seeks its level, so will commercial aviation . . . if Northfield seems necessary or even promising for its development . . . seek this town and locality. And the importance of commercial aviation to New England (and so to us) is rather well illustrated by the fact that the entire session of the Massachusetts State Meeting at the New England Conference in Boston, Nov. 21-22 (to which this editor has the honor of a personal invitation) is centered upon . . . Commercial Aviation.

And further, as one result of planes flying from our field and the consequent newspaper publicity and all, we have had considerable communication and some visits from those engaged in commercial aviation in New England. And our developing airport is getting listed and mapped among the other 150 and more similar developing airports of New England. And we have still other reasons for becoming more and more convinced that Northfield has a future in the great industry of Commercial Aviation.

Progress at the field continues whenever some of us can make the time to carry out the details of the developing schedule. The cash balance from the visit of the Flying Fleet is being utilized as seems necessary; among other things, in continuing the cutting down of the trees along the river bank, in marking and laying out the runways and in leveling and seeding down the bare places on the field. Cheerio!

OUR LOCAL ILLITERACY PROBLEM

The National Illiteracy Crusade, to Wipe Out Illiteracy by 1930, American Red Cross Building, Washington, D. C.; the Educational Department of the great Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and last, but certainly not least, several valued readers and friends, are anxious to help us here in Northfield and in the Big Circle Section generally. But we are still up against the important stumbling block of not being able to locate the 29 illiterates which (according to the last census) are charged against this town. And even in regard to the 1,516 illiterates said to be existent in Franklin County, we have only been able to gather the most indefinite sort of information.

It does seem to us remarkable that we can have so large a percentage of illiteracy in our midst without more evidence of it cropping out than has done so to date. And so we come to what looks to be our last resort . . . An appeal to those who should have the information desired:

SCHOOL CHILDREN??? Will you let us know of anybody, old or young, that YOU know of who cannot sign their name or read even simple words?

LOCAL OFFICIALS, EMPLOYERS OF LABOR, ETC. Will YOU let us know of anybody, old or young, who make their signatures with a mark?

ELECTION OFFICERS, POST OFFICE CLERKS, ETC. Will YOU let us know of anybody, young or old, who have to be assisted with documents on account of their illiteracy?

ALL SUCH INFORMATION WILL BE HELD IN CONFIDENCE AND SOURCE NOT MENTIONED WHEN NEIGHBORLY ASSISTANCE IN WRITING AND READING IS OFFERED.

May we not hear from YOU? Thank you.

Promptness is necessary for the reason that the time for the taking of the Census of 1930 is fast approaching, which, unless we can prevent it, will likely once again register us as having a VERY HIGH PERCENTAGE OF ILLITERATES. . . . We surely do not want to deserve this for either Northfield or Franklin County . . . do we? Cheerio!

THE MOODY AND SANKEY MEMORIAL

Everybody seems unanimous in the opinion that there should be a memorial of Moody and Sankey on Main Street and that its placing should be no longer delayed. Several have stated that they wanted to contribute and others have made some mighty good suggestions.

Our vision of it was just a sort of marker, bronze tablet on a boulder, with some such inscription as: THIS IS THE HOME TOWN OF MOODY AND SANKEY. And we pictured it as in the center of the little plot north of the Belcher Fountain. Some folks seem to think that this would not be worth while. That it should be a group statuary under a domed pavilion or something almost as elaborate.

We still keep to our original opinion for at least two reasons. One is that statuary is conventional and, if at all good, no end expensive, and cheap statuary is unthinkable. Our other reason is the time factor. We want to see this memorial with our own eyes in this present incarnation. We fear that this is not going to be likely if anything very elaborate and expensive is attempted.

Now how to set the wheels rolling properly? One good suggestion, it strikes us, is to have an article in the next Town Warrant, with the town appropriating say a hundred dollars, with the idea that other contributors would supply the balance of a couple of hundred additional that would be required for the set-up of such a marker. May we not hear from some of our citizens and readers regarding this suggestion?

If any of our local organizations want to take hold of this matter and put it across, we should be happy to contact them with the several who have already offered to contribute, and, also, we should like to co-operate in any and every way. All we want is the memorial in place by next spring. And if we do not allow ourselves to be lured off by impossibly expensive visions, the modest marker (serving every proper purpose) will materialize by then.

What do you say?

Little Ikey was crying bitterly out in the street in front of his father's store, when the Rev. J. B. McSnorter came along and asked what was the trouble.

"I lost a nickel," sobbed Ikey, "and poppa will lick me." "Oh, if that's all," said McSnorter kindly, "here's another nickel." Ikey took the money but cried louder than ever.

"Why don't you stop crying?" asked the pastor.

"Vell," sniffed Ikey, "ven I tell fadder you give it to me a nickel, he vill lick me for not saying I lost a dime."

"Most people admire my mouth." "Do I? I think it's immense."

Mrs. Mary E. Wilder

Following only a three-weeks' illness, with a complication of diseases, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth (Podmore) Wilder, 51, wife of John Wilder, died at 7 o'clock Sunday morning last.

Mrs. Wilder had been confined to her bed during this time, but previous to that she attended to her household duties. Born in Crown Point, N. Y., June 11, 1878, she was one of eight children of William and Isabella (Rogine) Podmore. She attended the public schools there and was a graduate of the Minerville, N. Y., high school. On July 4, 1898, she was united in marriage to John Wilder at Athol, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Wilder came to this town 19 years ago, where they had since lived.

Six children were born to them, all of whom survive, as follows: Harold of Putney, Vt.; Isabelle, wife of Leon C. Hall of Monson, Mass.; Albert of this town; Hazel, wife of Joseph Bilmon of Northfield, Mass.; Earl of Putney, Vt., and Ralph of this town.

Mrs. Wilder was a member of the local Methodist Episcopal church, but of no other organization.

Besides her husband and six children, she leaves her mother, Mrs. Isabelle (Rogine) Podmore of Hudson Falls, N. Y., who has been here caring for her daughter through her illness; and one sister, Florence, wife of James Duggan of this town; also one brother, George Podmore, who lives here.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist Episcopal church this week Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Brunold officiating. The bearers were Carl Chamberlain, Clayton Stancliff, Emil Rimbold, Henry Spaulding, Francis Cramer and Roy Pierce. Interment took place in Pine Grove cemetery.

"I've Been Reading"

By WILDER BUELL

A MODERN COMEDY by John Galsworthy, Scribners, pages 798, price $2.50.
An aristocrat is a man, or woman, who leads his own people. Anything less than that is a sham or an anachronism. Noblesse oblige means, if it means anything at all, that those who are in any way more fortunate than their fellows, in money, in education or in social position, must use that advantage for the good of their neighbors, their employees and their fellow citizens. If they do not, they may be fine people, they may be good people, they may be worthy of every respect, but they are not aristocrats in the original meaning of the word.
The book under review is a careful and elaborate study of the upper classes of post-war England. It is a collection, put out in one volume, of John Galsworthy's last three novels, "The Silver Spoon," "The White Monkey" and "Swan Song." It follows the "Forsyte Saga" and carries the story of those men of property into the present generation. Soames, in his old age, still with us, through the book, but it is primarily the story of his daughter.
And, frankly, I don't like his daughter. She is one of those women who take it for granted that they are superior to the rest of the world and are entitled to special privileges because of the accident of birth, while having no conception that such privileges entail any responsibilities. She is, in short, an aristocrat without a people behind her. And I suspect that Mr. Galsworthy does not like her either although he is fair enough to bring out her charm, the feminine quality that holds the love of her husband and father.
Throughout the book there runs a refrain of despair. Mr. Galsworthy evidently does not like the present age. He sees the English upper classes losing their hold on their people, a Labor Government coming into power, the land going to grass, and everything that has given the British aristocrat his power for the last thousand years, gradually slipping away. And he feels that the world is about to sink into chaos.
H. G. Wells, for all his silly socialism, sees life in better proportion. He realizes that England is not the world and, if the British upper classes, for all their splendid qualities, should disappear tomorrow, the world would still turn on its axis. There would still be people in the world, millions upon millions, and leaders of those people.
It is this provincialism that makes Mr. Galsworthy, in spite of his beautiful style and his careful observation of life, just a little tedious. At least, he bores me and I know that I ought not to be bored by one of our greatest modern novelists. But as I read, I cannot help feeling that I should like to take some of his characters out into the real world and show them the pitiful need that exists everywhere for intelligent leadership and constructive citizenship.
After reading this book, I picked up a copy of "The Tale of Two Cities" and re-read the last few pages. There is the message, from the pen of authentic genius, plain for all to read. I could not help wondering why the British aristocracy did not take that lesson to heart. And I also gave a wistful thought to what Dickens would have done with post-war England.

World's Best Fed Into the Red Furnace

To this generation everywhere in the world the Eleventh Day of November will always be a Day of Days. This is the eleventh anniversary of the Armistice that ended the greatest and most terrible, the most hateful and the most fateful of all wars. In the greater nations of the earth it will be marked by the roar of ceremonial guns, by the assembling of great crowds and among the more thoughtful by earnest searchings of the heart. There is no day in the calendar like this. Eleven years ago the guns ceased so suddenly that the world could not believe the hour of its deliverance had indeed come. The Americans had fought a slow and terrible way through the Argonne, across the Meuse and were deep in the Woerthe plain. The French had all but cleared their soil of the last invader. The British were back at the smoking coal pits of Mons, and far down the Somme they were sweeping through the "lost towns" of Belgium.

Twilight of the Gods.
Austria had gone down in the smoke of supreme disaster. The Hapsburgs had passed into the shadows and the dust of history. In Berlin, soldiers were throwing away their iron crosses and the naval mutineers were flying the red flag at Kiel. The Twilight of the Gods was falling upon the Ludendorffs and Von Moltkes. German emissaries had gone under a flag of truce to the forest of Compiègne. The wheel had swung full circle. It was time for the Great Accounting, for the reckoning of crimes and the fixing of punishments:

The Gods alone
Remember everlastingly; they strike
Remorselessly and ever like for like.
By their great memories the Gods are known.

And the world waited for the word from the woods of northern France, where Foch faced Von Gundell across a narrow table and a new chapter of history was opening. There, eleven years ago, while the murmur of fighting and the flicker of gunfire still ran from the North sea to the plains of Alsace, the remaking of the world map was begun.

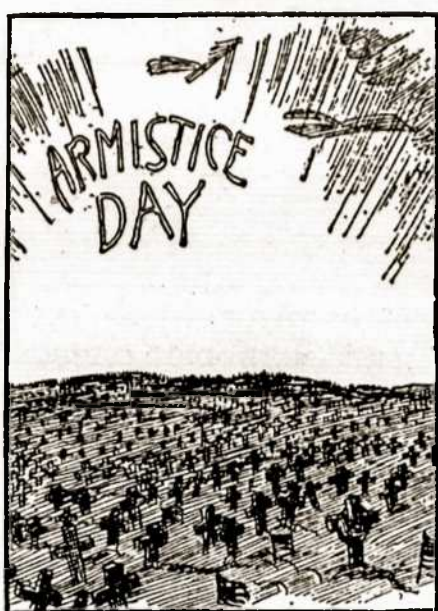

Problems Still to Solve.
It still proceeds, less swiftly than in the forest of Compiègne or around the peace table of Versailles. The forces loosed both by the war and by the peace have yet to run their courses. Nor have all the gains and losses of the war been assessed. The gains were incalculable, but eleven years after only few of them are finally and securely won. We still are wrestling with the problems of disarmament and with the hideous legacy of wartime passions.

The greatest losses fell upon the Country of the Young. The flower of humanity, the strongest, the most spirited, the hope of their generation, had marched by the millions into the Red Furnace. The young poet left his songs unsung, the young artist his pictures unpainted, the youthful builder his buildings unbuilt. They joined that gallant procession that now marches only along the roads of Memory, and the world is poor indeed without them.

Armistice day belongs both to the Quick and the Dead. It is a yearly testimonial to all the fallen, whether it is celebrated at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, at the cenotaphs, the battle gates or the arches of triumph or in some quiet country place far from the flags and the music of ceremony. The crowds and the solemn processions bear annual witness that these dead have not died altogether in vain and that their memory will endure so long as men set honor and courage above ease and contentment.

For the living it is a reminder that war has not forever gone and that its madness lurks deep in the race. This and the lessons of duty, of devotion of self-sacrifice and of discipline are the supreme lessons of the struggle that ended eleven years ago today. On this and on every Eleventh of November, despite the disillusion and despairs of Peace, humanity can look back to that cold, gray autumn morning of 1918 and remind itself that once, at least, it touched the very peaks of human greatness.

LESSON OF WAR

—New York World

"That these dead shall not have died in vain."
